Rebecca sold flags for the first time last October and she sold them again in December. Some people just walked past but there were a lot of kind-hearted people who were willing to help. An old man put in a $500 note in her bag. She almost cried.

1. Which of the following is TRUE about Rebecca?

- A. She was angry with people who didn't donate money.
- B. She raised $500 by selling flags.
- C. An old man gave her $500 for helping to sell flags.
- D. She was moved because some people were kind to help.

'The Old Book and Toy Donation in March was a big success! We collected over 1,000 old toys and books for the poor children in Hong Kong,' said Eric. 'I was surprised to find so many children not having enough money to buy toys and books. I'll never spend so much on new toys again and I'll cherish what I've got.'

2. Why was Eric surprised when he took part in the charity event?

- A. They collected more than 1,000 old toys and books.
- B. He thought every child in Hong Kong could afford toys and books.
- C. He spent a lot on toys and books.
- D. A lot of children had so many books and toys.

I took part in the Walk for the Poor in April and raised over $2,000! I would like to thank all the 32 people who sponsored me. I was very tired in the end but still finished the walk. And there's always more happiness in giving than receiving.'

3. Which of the following is NOT true about Ada?

- A. She raised more than $2,000.
- B. 32 people donated money to support her.
- C. She thought the walk was easy.

A group of volunteers skipped their own family celebrations to spend time with the elderly at Mid-Autumn Festival yearly. They prepared a series of fun and elderly-friendly activities. This is not the only charity event that these volunteers organise each year. They also plan Christmas and Chinese New Year parties. As they are volunteers, it goes without saying that their goal is not money and that they don't get paid. They just want to grow their group to help build a more caring Hong Kong.

4. Which of the following is TRUE?

- A. The charity event is held every two years.
- B. The charity event was organised by the staff at the elderly centre.
- C. The volunteers organise other charity events as well.
- D. The volunteers are given vouchers for organising the event.
